

Parents redefine success @work@home

Are you a parent who is frustrated with conventional employment offerings? Are you content with how your parenting role is playing out? Do you want to collaborate with a community that is eager to imagine how it could be different? Where the work options are compelling and acknowledgment of our commitment to work/life balance is honored? Let's explore solutions together to redefine success both @work and @home.

Led by MAMAGORA and NAHdenken

MAMAGORA is an empowered community of mothers who are ready to redefine and shape their future work. We believe that if we set the course, we can find a healthy work/life balance. We value community as our best problem-solving tool.

We gain clarity and energy when we form personal connections and forge new collaborations. We envision an entirely new approach to work that has the potential to transform the marketplace.

NAHdenken is a thought-provoking think-tank and a social business that invites discourse on family-related topics. We help people to achieve a better self -and family awareness which forms the basis for an adequate self- and family management. As a social business we offer relevant services selectively that fit the specific needs of (working) parents and family-friendly companies and organization.
